

Supply Chain Leadership

Leadership can influence Outcomes.

The COVID-19 crisis has enabled our supply chain community to embrace the challenges that are ahead and Leadership is clearly front and centre. We cannot just rely on our technical/core skills, we need to adapt, expand and grow.

The journey is challenged by the fact that supply chain managers are often not on the workforce radar. Supply chain management is still not sufficiently recognised as one of the key components of the execution of corporate strategy and there is still an under representation at the executive level, until COVID-19 came along and changed everything.

Time is now to change that mindset and enhance the quality of the supply chain workforce and the status of supply chain management.

Yes, we need to develop partnerships with our educational institutions, professional organizations and associations. We must also thoughtfully develop a Talent Management Strategy.

Time for Leadership to influence Outcomes.

Do you have a plan?

Ivan Imparato, Principal Consultant, impiva business solutions

